MANY SUBJECTS

Discussed at the Second Day's Session of the Macon County Farmers' Institute.

THE ATTENDANCE WAS BETTER.

Mrs. Carter and Miss Mills Talk on Domestic Science.

The following program was given at the Farmers institute yesterday afternoon:

Songs--Pupils of the Decatur schools, led by Miss Clark.

Domestic Science in schools--Mrs. Jos. Carter of Champaign.

Declaration--Ruth Hostetter.

Horses on the farm and at the university--N. J. Morehouse, instructor of animal husbandry, University of Illinois, Urbana.

FREE TO ALL.

Opportunities to Learn Domestic Science Without Cost--University Offers Free Scholarships.

In her address Mrs. Carter spoke of the need of domestic science in the home. The government has established experiment stations for the betterment of the stock and agricultural industries of the country. But very little has been done for the betterment of the households of the country. She said, a woman's labor can not be measured in dollars and cents as the earnings of the farmer. Yet her position is one of the greatest importance. Through the farmer's institutes the women come into contact and get new ideas which they have never before heard of. There is no competition between the farmer's wives as there is between the different farmers so they haven't the means of acquiring a broad knowledge of their science.

The agricultural stations are a great benefit but not as much as a system of domestic science would be if taught in the schools. The women of the state have been able to get a department of domestic science in the state university at Urbana. Every county is entitled to send a student each year free of charges. This scholarship entitles them to not only a course in domestic science but also a regular course through the university. Six years of free tuition may be had by the students in this way. As one may be sent each year, the county can have six students there all the time during the school term. One week of free instruction in domestic science is also given to any people that will attend. As a result of the women's activity in this line, eighty-one counties have been organized for the purpose of securing a place in the public schools for domestic science.

It is not the aim to teach only the art of cooking but to teach all the household duties. The children would be taught how to market, what kind of clothing to buy, and what kind of food to eat. They would be taught how to buy so that a dollar will bring all it can. The change of the district schools to the central school as it is now proposed would make all this practicable.

THE HORSE INDUSTRY

Talk By Mr. Morehouse in Which Some Valuable Suggestions Are Given.

Mr. Morehouse in his talk on the horse industry gave the plan of the animal husbandry department in the University of Illinois. Mr. Morehouse before taking his position in the university, was a practical horse raiser and horse buyer. He gave the origin of several breeds of horses and the characteristics of each. The horse that has the action and the style, he said is the one that brings the price on the market; flesh and size do not count for a great deal, unless the horse is undersized and very poor. But there is no use for a horse that has no action.

Advantage of Knowing.

"The farmers do not know what they have when it comes to good horses. I have bought horses at low prices and the farmer thought it was all they were worth and yet these horses would bring fancy prices in the markets." He told where he had bought one horse for forty-five dollars and kept him four weeks to get him in condition and then got four hundred and fifty dollars for him.

Answers Questions.

Mr. Morehouse answered a few questions asked him by the farmers as follows: What kind of feed would you give a horse to fatten him?

Do not give him too much corn, but some bran and oats. Keep your horse in good condition but do not load him down with fat.

When is the best time to break a colt?

A colt should be broke when quite young. He may be broken and used to drive some when only one year old if handled right.

Should boys be allowed to handle the horses?

It is well to get the boys get acquainted with the horses and get used to them, but it is well to keep them from running races and thereby ruining the horse.

How would you fatten a horse?

Give him plenty of good wholesome food and plenty of exercise.

When is the best time to wean a colt?

Between the age of four and six months. The colt should not be allowed to run with the mare when working.

He stated in answer to a question that horses lose much in shipping, and that in a seemingly fine condition will often lose much, and not look like the same animal. Horses are very likely to get sick in shipping and change of place will often cause the horse to die. Many horses that reach New York from this part of the country only live six or eight weeks.

Demand is Great.

Just now there is a large demand for horses and the supply has fallen off. In the five leading horse markets of the country there was a decline of 17,000 last year. The demand is now great than the supply and must be for some time.

Sell Products Today.

The product at the institute will be sold this afternoon. The committee on resolutions appointed by Mr. Beem is as follows: E. R. Hurlbut, C. H. Scott, and Frank Mulhender. Nominating committee, John Rucker, J. W. Walker and B. Burrows.

EVENING PROGRAM.

Feature Was Miss Mills' Talk on Value of Food.

There was a very pretty program given at the Farmers' institute last night. The circuit court room was crowded and many could not get inside. The program was as follows: Music, Ladies' Musical Culture Club. Reading, Evelyn Lehman. Piano Solo, Miss Cozad. Reading, Mrs. Jeanette Tyler. Song, Miss Mae Harwood. Talk on domestic science, Miss Ida Mills. Recitation, Mrs. J. T. Galbraith of Carbondale. Music, Van Hall orchestra. Vocal solo, Miss Grace Van Hall.

Each number was heartily enjoyed and Mr. Galbraith's recitations were especially pleasing and he was called back several times.

On Cookery.

Miss Mills in her talk on domestic science gave several suggestions as to how to cook food properly. Beef, mutton and lamb, she said, contain more nutriment than the other meats. The best way to cook these meats, and all to fire on one side and the air on the other. Boiling and stewing are somewhat alike. In cooking meat in any way it should be cooked so that the juice or nutriment is kept within the meat. For this reason frying is undesirable, and the meat cooked in this way is hard to digest. Butter is the poorest material to fry with as it loses its virtue when heated to a temperature of 212 degrees. Cotton seed oil is the best of all for frying purposes. The second cooking of meats, just reheating them, makes them more digestible.

The starchy goods give heat and energy. The most valuable of the starchy foods are rice and wheat. All starchy foods must be well cooked. Rice should be cooked one hour, and it requires one hour for digestion. The best way to cook potatoes is by baking. All starchy foods must be cooked in unsalted water and not boiled, but just simmer.

Vegetable foods are valuable for the mineral matter they contain and the waste matter. They should be thoroughly boiled. If vegetables that have an odor are not allowed to boil too hard they will not give off an odor in cooking. Salads are about the same as vegetables in nutriment.

Good and Bad Points.

Pies and heavy puddings are not very digestible, but custards are very good instead of meat. Canned goods are too easily fermented. Cysters, while easy to digest are not the best of food. They are liable to ptomaine poisoning. Fish are easy to digest and are a good food. In the pink fishes the oil is through the body and they are not so easily digested as the white fish as in them the oil is in the liver.

Tea and coffee are stimulants and are not foods. The active elements of tea and coffee have a reaction upon the heart. Tea and cream are a bad combination and should not be used. Chocolate is not a beverage but a food and is very nourishing. Chocolate should not be used with heavy meals. Water is in truth the only beverage. Milk is strictly a food.

Bread baked twice is the most nourishing as it is then almost digested. Cakes are hard of digestion. Pancakes are unfit to eat unless served immediately after making and then they are very difficult of digestion. Nuts are a very valuable food because of the oil they contain, but they must be thoroughly masticated. Chestnuts are different from all others and because of the starch they contain they should be cooked. Chestnuts in small quantities is beneficial but should not be used in large quantities.

THE MORNING SESSION.

Attendance Improved and Papers Proved Interesting to All.

The morning session of the second day of the institute opened with a somewhat better attendance. The exercises were according to the program published in the Herald, there being no addresses. The first of these was by Dr. A. R. Taylor of the James Millikin university, who spoke on "Books in the Home," giving some very desirable information as to the character and value of reading.

L. H. Smith, chief assistant in chemistry in the University of Illinois, spoke on the "Improvement of Corn by Breeding." His remarks were illustrated by charts and diagrams.

Charles Rowe of Jacksonville, judged the corn that had been on exhibition. He is an expert in that line. The points used in judging the exhibits were as follows: Uniformity, 10; shape, 5; color, 10; market condition, 5; tips, 10; butts, 5; kernel uniformity, 5; kernel shape, 5; length, 10; circumference, 5; spike, 10; proportion, 20; total, 100.

One feature of the institute that has attracted considerable attention has been the traveling library. It was shown for the purpose of enlightening the farmers of the opportunity of receiving first class reading for the asking. These traveling libraries are under the direction of the state institute. All that is necessary is to make application to A. B. Hostetter, the secretary, and the library will be expressed to the person making the request. The only charge is the payment of the express bill, and the return of the books in good order. One person in a community is expected to act as librarian.

The following is the program for the closing day of the institute.

MEN PAID PITTANCE.

Carry Vast Responsibility for Life and Property.

On about $1 a week--often less--a certain seaman on any first-class battleship in the British navy has a job in which a single mistake might wipe out of existence 1500 souls and a money value of nearly $2,000,000. This is the signal man for the time being who carries out the signal orders of the admiral, either by the code flags or by "flag-wagging," and directs the movements of the fleet. When a squadron is making a passage, it generally travels in what is called "grid-iron" order, and in changing places, or at steam tactics--which are so dangerous that foreign navies do not practice them--a single wrongly-signaled order would bring two of the vessels into collision, and one probably both--would certainly be sunk. It is very easy to make a mistake in signalling, but only one serious error, resulting in an accident, has been made so far, and that was ten years ago. If a signal man makes even the smallest technical mistake he is hauled up and severely "dressed down." There are half a dozen ways of signalling in the navy.

Still more anxious--and even more certain to lead to terrible fatalities if anything went wrong--are the six jobs of the signal men in the six most complicated and difficult railway signal boxes in Britain. Before these, all others are comparatively unimportant, and a mistake by any of these six men would easily produce an accident that would kill or injure from 200 to 300 people, and destroy about $50,000 worth of property within twenty counted seconds. At wages ranging little above 30 shillings a week, this is one of the largest "orders" in Britain, and has one of the finest records in each case, and the heads and hands of these men deal with more lives and more money value per day than any others--London Answers.

MEETINGS.

The Ladies sewing circle of the German M. E. church will meet Thursday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Chas. Bauch, 538 East Clay street.

Regular meeting this evening of Fern Leaf No. 14 Rathbone Sisters, Mrs. A. N. Cope, E. C.

BILL DISCUSSED

At Women's Club Mrs. Catherine Waugh McCulloch Speaks On Tax Paying Suffrage Measure.

AN ACT OF SIMPLE JUSTICE.

An Address By Mrs. Henrotin—Club Amendments Acted On.

The reception given at the Women's club building yesterday in connection with the general meeting of the club was one of the most successful and enjoyable affairs of the season. There was a large attendance and the addresses of the well known speakers were listened to with interest and frequent applause.

During the afternoon the ladies were favored with several vocal selections by Miss Clara Gere of Champaign. Miss Gere, who is the guest of Mrs. T. L. Evans is the daughter of an old school-mate of Mrs. Evans. Miss Gere possesses a very high soprano voice of delightful quality and great flexibility. Her enunciation is clear, and she sings with expression and feeling. The selections which she gave yesterday were "Love Absolute," by N. Childer Wilson; "Villanelle," by Dell Aqua; "You and I" and "The Swing" by Liza Lehmann. She responded graciously to several encores Miss Nita Clark acted as her accompanist.

Amendments.
The directory of the club met at 2 o'clock and at half past 2 o'clock the general meeting began. Under the general business three amendments to the constitution were brought up. An amendment to add to the list of officers a financial secretary was lost to the regret of the directory, who are in the best position to understand the need of such an officer. The amendment was not exactly defeated, but was lost through the silence of a large number of members who did not vote either way.

The other amendments provide for the collection of dues and the details of the annual general election. Briefly, two tickets are to be prepared, one by the directory and the other by a committee of the club and the voting is to be by the Australian method. These carried.

Delegates.
Delegates to the approaching District Federation meeting at Clinton were chosen as follows: Mrs. Sarah Woodward, Mrs. Alice Pinner and Miss Leonette Johnson; alternates, Mrs. Kora Evans, Mrs. Inez Bender, and Miss Ritchie Ditzler.

Woman's Suffrage Bill.
The usual reports of the divisions and of the standing committees were omitted and Mrs. McCulloch introduced Mrs. Catherine Waugh McCulloch of Chicago, who spoke on the pending bill for an act to entitle tax paying women to vote for certain offices and to participate in and vote at certain meetings and on certain measures.

The bill which was introduced by Mr. Owen in the Illinois house of representatives Jan. 21, 1902, is now in the hands of the committee on elections and came up for discussion Wednesday at Springfield. Mrs. McCulloch with twenty-five ladies representing the Women's clubs of the state, who are behind the bill, were in Springfield on that day to lobby for the bill.

The first section, which practically explains the bill is as follows:

Section 1. Be it enacted by the people of the state of Illinois represented in the general assembly: That all tax-paying women who are citizens of the United States, above the age of 21 years, having resided in the state one year, in the county ninety days, and in the election district thirty days next preceding any election therein, shall be allowed to vote at such election for member of the state board of equalization, county collector, members of board of assessors, members of board of review, sanitary district trustees and for all officers of cities, villages and towns except police magistrates. The words "tax-paying women," as used in this act shall be held to mean women who have paid taxes within two years previous to the election on property situated in the state.

The further sections of the bill provide that women qualified as described may also vote for the following township officers: supervisor, town clerk, assessor, collector and highway commissioner; and on all questions of issuing bonds for municipal or school purposes, on the question of borrowing money, increasing tax levy and all other questions submitted to the electors in the state. They may also vote at town meetings.

The bill provides for separate ballots and ballot boxes and that they shall register the same as men.

Mrs. McCulloch is one of the brightest women in the state. She is in the law business with her husband, and is the only woman in the state who has been admitted to practice before the supreme court. She spoke earnestly on the simple justice of the provisions of the bill and the need for it. On being assured that there were no reporters present Mrs. McCulloch gave an entertaining account of the views of the senator and representatives from this district. These were in the nature of heart-to-heart talks with herself and are not reproduced. Mrs. McCulloch was heartily applauded.

Mrs. Charles Henrotin, who is here as the guest of Mrs. Eugene Bacon, spoke on "Some Women Who Have Influenced the Status of Womanhood."

Mrs. Henrotin was for four years president of the general federation and is a woman of wide culture and charming personality. She told something of the work done for women by the late Queen Victoria and the late Dowager Empress Frederick of Germany. Mrs. Henrotin has been presented at both courts and spoke most entertainingly of the personality of these two women.

After the addresses a reception was held for the speakers and the members had an opportunity to meet the ladies informally. Refreshments of bouillon and wafers were served. The reception was given by the directory and Mrs. M. W. Shultz was in charge of the entertainment committee, assisted by Mrs. J. M. Sellers, Mrs. Dan Tait, Mrs. W. E. Carter, Mrs. C. E. Akers, Mrs. Eugene Terry, Mrs. Ella Wilson Miller, Miss Buckingham, Miss Donna Buckingham, Miss Estella Brooks, Miss Edith Starr, and Miss Birdie Ditzler. The rooms were prettily decorated in green and yellow with ferns and Marechal Niel roses.

CHAMPAIGN'S CANDIDATES.

Brief Sketch of Men Who Want to Be Circuit Judges.

In Champaign county tomorrow primaries will be held for the selection of a candidate for circuit judge. A brief sketch of the three candidates follows:

Calvin C. Staley.
Judge Staley, present county judge of Champaign county, is a graduate of the law school of the University of Michigan. In 1877 he was admitted to the bar and became the junior member of the firm of Langley & Staley until Colonel Langley was elected county judge, and when Judge Langley resigned, Mr. Staley was appointed by Governor Flier to succeed him and he has held the office ever since.

Judge Staley possesses a legal mind, judicially trained beyond his years. As a judge, he is singularly free from prejudice. The higher courts, in nearly all cases reviewed by them, have sustained his rulings.

At various times, on account of his special qualifications, Judge Staley has been called upon to lecture before the law school of the University of Illinois, and his lectures are regarded by the faculty and students, as among the most interesting and instructive of those delivered by any of the special lecturers.

Franklin H. Boggs.
Mr. Boggs is a native of Champaign county. He was born in Pesotum township thirty-seven years ago. He graduated from the Tusculum high school and then attended the University of Illinois, college of literature and arts, one year. Afterwards he took the law course at Northwestern University and was admitted to the bar in 1890. He practiced law one year in Champaign as partner of J. L. Ray. Then he formed a partnership with Judge J. O. Cunningham of Urbana.

Mr. Boggs has never sought prominence in political matters, but is recognized as an able lawyer and a man of high attainments.

Solon Philbrick.
Solon Philbrick is a member of the law firm of Gere & Philbrick of Champaign. He was educated at the University of Illinois and has practiced law in that county ever since his graduation. He has been a prominent republican worker for years, and has held master in chancery and membership of the state board of equalization. He was appointed by the governor recently as circuit judge for the unexpired term of Judge Wright. He will hold court in Monticello, next week for Judge Cochran and he will do his best to make us have a good opinion of him.

AMUSEMENTS.

"Chaperones" Tonight.

Dainty in music and jolly as a Parisian larc is the way it's admirers describe "The Chaperones," which Frank L. Perley's big musical comedy company will give at the Grand Opera House this evening for the benefit of the fund for the blind. The company is said to have a singing strength equal to the average comic opera company, while its comedy is to a large extent, a collection of amusing eccentricities. Among the songs in the show, Walter once "Sunshow it Made Him Think of Home," Eva Tanguay's "My Sambo," May Boley's "Modern Chaperones," Albert Farrington's tenor solo and chorus, "We'll All Good Fellows," Edward McFadden's great bass song, "My Low C," and George K. Henry's popular number, "In My Official Capacity," while the ditty by Genevieve Fay, "The Little Girl Who Couldn't Say No," is said to be one of the daintiest bits of recent song writing.

Donations to the Home.

The following donations were made to the Anna B. Millikin Home during the month of January: Endeavor of First Presbyterian church, children's clothing; Mrs. John Sweetenham, underwear; Mrs. Scruggs, magazines; Mrs. T. B. Hoskins, clothing and washing fluid; a friend, nine pairs of shoes and cash; Mrs. Cray, a quantity of baking powder; Mrs. Buckingham, sweet potatoes; mite box from Lyons Lumber Co.; Mrs. Brown's annual subscription, $5; a friend, cash, $7; Mrs. I. D. Stine, for children's treat, $1; Mrs. Pasold, baby clothes; Parlor meat market, a large quantity of meat; Mrs. Guyard, children's clothing; Mrs. P. H. Bushway, three jars blackberries and children's clothing; Mrs. O'Meara, children's clothing; Mrs. Nall, children's clothing; Mrs. A. V. Eppy, literature; Mrs. Rothfuss, children's clothing; Miss Ollie Kunkle, literature; Mrs. Maris, turnips; Mrs. Clifford, a pork loaf.

HIS OTHER PANTS.

Proud Moment in the Life of a Poor Student.

Dr. Edmund J. James, president of the Northwestern university, is a self-made man. It was largely through his own exertions that he was able to go through Harvard and complete his education at German universities.

At times in his student career he had difficulties in making ends meet, and in this connection he tells an interesting story of an expedient he invoked while at Harvard to obtain a slight assistance from a relative who had promised to further his ambitions, but whose performance in that regard had been slow.

Dr. James' room-mate at college was Joseph French Johnson, now professor of political economy in the university of New York.

The young men were from the same town.

"With my frugal relative," said Dr. James, "my friend Johnson stood better than I. Whatever he did was held up as an example. One of my early ambitions in college was to own an extra pair of trousers which might be kept exclusively for wear on Sundays and other special occasions. Other needs, however, were so urgent that I found I should have to content myself with one pair, and, at the time of which I speak, these were not all that could be desired.

"One day Johnson turned up with a brand-new pair. I realized that if my economical relative knew that Johnson had a second pair of trousers I also should be able to get a pair.

"The question was how to make a convincing presentation of the case. Simply to write did not commend itself to my judgment. Finally I hit upon a plan which I diplomatically presented to Johnson. It was that we should make an express package of the new trousers and send them to my relative. This would show that Johnson not only boasted of new trousers but that he actually owned them without being under the stern necessity of wearing them every day. I must confess that it was an act of great friendly self-denial on Johnson's part, for his elder pair were in fragile health. The experiment worked like a charm. By return express Johnson's trousers came back and with them, consigned to me, was a pair which the old gentleman had himself selected. The cut was a trifle bizarre and the pattern might have gladdened the eye of a poster artist."

Prof. Johnson tells the rest of the story.

"James' appearance in his new trousers was an event in our college life. One of the first persons he encountered as he stalked across the campus was President Eliot, who had a high opinion of James' genius and sense of humor, and took pleasure in crossing wits with him.

"Good morning, Mr. James," said the president; "let me congratulate you on looking almost as bright as you really are."

"Mr. Eliot," replied James, assuming a statuesque attitude, designed to bring his resplendent trousers into conspicuous relief, "I have reached that proud position in life where I can speak of my other pants."--Saturday Evening Post.

Tendency of the Times.

The tendency of medical science is toward preventive measures. The best thought of the world is being given to the subject. It is easier and better to prevent than to cure. It has been fully demonstrated that pneumonia, one of the most dangerous diseases that medical men have to contend with, can be prevented by the use of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. Pneumonia always results from a cold or an attack of influenza (grip), and it has been observed that this remedy always serves that this remedy always serves to prevent pneumonia. This has been fully proven in many thousands of cases in which this remedy has been used during the prevalence of colds and grip in recent years and can be relied upon with implicit confidence. Pneumonia often results from a slight cold when no danger is apprehended until it is suddenly discovered that here is fever and difficulty in breathing and pains in the chest, then it is announced that the patient has pneumonia. Be on the safe side and take Chamberlain's Cough Remedy as soon as the cold is contracted. It always cures. For sale by all druggists.

Curious Travels of a Bullet.

A very large volume might be written by a competent military surgeon on the extraordinary eccentricities of bullets on the battle field. And no campaign since the pointed bullet came in has afforded more remarkable instances than that which has recently terminated in South Africa. But even in the Crimea, the pointed, in that instance, the Minie bullet, gave the doctors much to think of to which the history of surgery in the days of the old round bullet formed no guide whatever. In a swamp campaign in Central America, two years and a bit after the end of the Crimean war, one Minie bullet's humors afforded cause for much wonder and gossip. It was fired across the San Juan river, about thirty miles above Greytown, glanced off a branch of a tree, caught an American filibuster in the right forearm, traveled up the arm, round the back, and emerged from beneath the skin, to be again diverted by a buckle on a bandolier back into the body, where it ran down the left arm and lodged just above the wrist, whence it was easily removed by the point of a jackknife. The man fell for dead, but in about a minute scrambled to his knees and called out: "I say, boys, what the --- was that?" He said rather freely, especially at the back, but there was an end of it, and he was one of the few who returned from that ill-guided expedition for the relief of William Walker, who then sought to win Central America for the slave owners of the South--London Leader.

Proving a Statement.

The late Anson D. F. Randolph, the publisher, had this one as his favorite story:

"Two country clergymen who were attending the general assembly had a discussion on creed revision while being shown through the Presbyterian hospital. When they entered the operating room, another member of the party saw a skeleton in a corner, and, hoping to break up the debate, which had become acrimonious, laughingly said, as he pointed to the skeleton: "Well, gentlemen, what say you about this fellow? Did he advocate the 'new' or the 'old' school of Presby-

Only Woman President.

The only woman president of a national bank in the United States, Mrs. Evelyn Towne of Port Deposit, Md., a widow of 48, is to marry Irvine France, a medical graduate in Baltimore, who is only 28. This incident effectually pulverizes the theory that business destroys the feminine quality in women who pursue it.

terianism?

"The old school, most decidedly," was the prompt and emphatic reply of the defender of the doctrines of that party.

"May I ask what makes you so positive--to give us a reason for the faith that is in you?"

"Certainly. There can not be the slightest doubt that that was an 'old school' Presbyterian, for, pointing gleefully to that part of the anatomy, 'don't you see he has a spinal column?'"--New York Times.

The period of good cheer is now upon us, and the frown should be taken to cold storage.
